

Over ten years ago now (March 28, 2006) I had a debate with William Lane Craig at the College of the Holy Cross, on the question: "Is There Historical Evidence for the Resurrection of Jesus?" Craig is a conservative evangelical Christian philosopher (yes, a real philosopher — that is, he teaches courses in philosophy and writes about it; but from a very conservative Christian perspective).

I had never met Craig before the debate, and in places the debate gets a little ... lively. Even testy. Craig and I have had zero contact with each other ever since.

Craig provided a full transcript of the debate on his site Reasonable Faith here: <http://www.reasonablefaith.org/is-there-historical-evidence-for-the-resurrection-of-jesus-the-craig-ehrman> I would assume that since he posted the transcript he thinks he pretty much mopped me up. Maybe he did!

Please note: The video quality from the source is not great, since old-style equipment was used to record the event. We have added color and audio correction, but overall it is not up to our normal standards.

Please adjust gear icon for pseudo 720p High-Definition:

[Drew Marshall Show - Jesus Before The Gospels
Can Biblical Scholars Be Historians?](#)