

Are you having a difficult time, losing your faith? Having doubts, but still trying to hold on? Or not sure if you want to hold on any longer?

A couple of days ago I mentioned the “Clergy Project” the organization for clergy (“religion professionals”) who have lost their faith and no longer believe in the supernatural. One of the founders of the project, Linda LaScola, has reminded me that she edits a blog that is completely public (for anyone interested) for just folk like you (not just clergy), called Rational Doubt - With Voices from The Clergy Project. The posts on the blog are actually written by members of The Clergy Project.

Moreover, if you’re interested more in who these ex-clergy are and about the phenomenon of religious professionals losing their faith, you may want to check out the book that Linda produced with the justly famous philosopher Daniel C. Dennett of Tufts University, called Caught in the Pulpit: Leaving the Faith Behind. You can find it at amazon.com.

Blog Fund-Raising Dinner, December 3
Christian Pastors Who Have Lost Their Faith